CURRENT OFFENSE: Grossi was sentenced in the U. S. District Court at Dallas, Texas, February 5, 1953, to serve four years for violation of the National Stolen Property Act and violation of the NMVTA. The record indicates that Grossi stole an automobile in August of 1952, in Lubbock, Texas, which car was the property of one Charles C. Bishop. Mr. Bishop's identification papers were in the car and among other things some legal blank checks of the First National Bank, McDonald, Pennsylvania. Grossi traveled over the country in the stolen car and started writing checks using Mr. Bishop's checks and forging his name. He traveled thru many states and was finally apprehended in Dallas, Texas.

Grossi stated that he entered a plea of guilty and was guilty as charged. He said he stole the car because he wanted to travel but had no particular destination in mind and decided to use the blank checks which were available in order to gain money to finance his travels.

Grossi is beginning his fourth institutional sentence. He was committed to the state home for boys at Jamesburg, New Jersey, in 1943 on an indeterminate sentence for juvenile delinquency. He made fair progress there but had two escapes. He escaped in 1943 but was returned two days later and escaped again in March of 1944 and was never returned to the institution. He maintained a clear conduct at Terre Haute after being committed in 1946 to serve two years for impersonation of a government officer. He was paroled in January of 1947 and was committed to El Reno in 1949 to serve a three year sentence for violation of the NMVTA. His adjustment at El Reno was very satisfactory and his conduct record was clear. His overall institutional adjustment appears satisfactory. There is a detainer on file by the sheriff of Volusia County, Florida, for forgery.

Committed Name GROSSI, John Caesar

Register Number 89642-I April 1, 1953

Grossi's father was a native American born in Paterson, New Jersey, separated from the mother when Grossi was approximately three years of age. They were later divorced and the present whereabouts of the father is unknown. He states that his father was a commercial artist and has been arrested on a number of occasions for passing worthless checks, drunkenness and non support. There is very little other information in our files on the father. His mother was born in Paterson, New Jersey, and is being supported by her second husband. He states that the relationships with his mother have not been good and he does not desire to have any contact with her while he is at the institution.

Grossi states that he has one brother and one sister, both older than he and that addresses are unknown. He says that they both have been in difficulty with the law and he has had little or no contact with them in recent years.

Grossi was born August 5, 1928, at Paterson, New Jersey, to native American parents. In so far as he can remember, Grossi claims fair health as a child states that he lived in the home with his mother during his early life. He says that he began school at the age of seven and made normal progress completing approximately nine grades. The record indicates that during these early years, Grossi was alert and aggressive and was beyond the control of his mother. At approximately the age of 12, he had been placed in various foster homes and by 1943, he had failed to adjust in at least 5 different foster homes. During these years, Grossi had attended various public schools in Paterson and had held several minor jobs such as newspaper carrier, milkman helper, and bakery truck helper. On one occasion, he took a battery valued at $20.00 from one foster father and embezzled $12.00 received from selling newspapers. He was quite frequently truant from school and in 1943, when he was approximately 15, he ran away from one of his foster homes. In March of 1943, Grossi was committed to the state home for boys in Jamesburg, New Jersey to serve an indeterminate sentence for juvenile delinquency (stealing). His progress was fair while at the institution but he escaped in August of 1943 and was apprehended three days later in Pennsylvania and was returned to the institution. He escaped for the second time in March of 1944 and never returned to the institution. However, he was considered trustworthy acting as a junior night watch man for a period of time and received satisfactory work reports working in the creamery. Following his escape, Grossi went to Savannah, Georgia where he was arrested for wearing the uniform of the United States Navy but the charge was dismissed. He was next heard of in New Orleans where he was arrested by the U. S. Marshal and was given seven days on a charge of impersonation. Our records indicate that Grossi migrated to Miami in December of 1944 and then returned to Shreveport, Louisiana where he was arrested in February of 1945 for investigation but was released outright. Apparently he then went to Chicago where he was arrested in 1946 on a forgery charge and was removed by the U. S. Marshal to Detroit on a charge of impersonation. A two year sentence was imposed upon him and he was committed to the USP, Terre Haute, Indiana. Following admission, Grossi was assigned to the educational department as a teacher in the art classes and was described as being dependable and received satisfactory work reports. His conduct was clear and his overall institutional adjustment was satisfactory prior to his parole in January of 1947. Grossi states that following his release from Terre Haute, he obtained work as a free lance cartoonist. He states that he continued in this occupation for approximately two years but we have no verification on this employment. Grossi was next arrested in Indianapolis in July of 1949 for investigation of violation of the Lyer Act and was turned over to the U. S. Marshal at St. Paul where he was held in jail until removal to Dallas, Texas in September of 1949 when he received a three year sentence for violation of the Lyer Act and was committed to El Reno in October of the same year. Grossi was assigned as editor of the inmate's publication at El Reno and his work was outstanding and he received meritorious good time and pay. He had clear conduct during the 25 months of his incarceration and his overall institutional adjustment was considered very good. Shortly after being released from El Reno in November of 1951, Grossi obtained employment with the Wally of Hollywood Studios, in Dallas, Texas, as a photographer. He states that he remained on this job for several months and quit for better opportunity with the E. S. McGoldrick Studios in Dallas where he worked as a photographer for a short period of time. We have received no employment verification as of to date. Grossi states that during the middle of 1952, he began to have marital difficulties, quit working, and decided to travel. He stole a car in Lubbock, Texas and in the car was found personal papers and blank checks which was the property Charles Bishop. Grossi states that he drove the car thru various states and used the blank checks to finance his escapades by forgery. He states that he had no particular destination in mind but just wanted to run away from every thing. At present there is a detainer on file by the sheriff of Volusia, Deland County, Florida, for forgery. He lists his social security number as 436-36-3973.

Grossi is divorced. Grossi's wife states that they were married [redacted] at [redacted]. Our records indicate that a divorce was granted [redacted] at [redacted]. The wife states that the relationship was not a happy one and that Grossi was good to her and their son when things went his way but when they went contrary to his desires, he often had temper tantrums. She states that she is a secretary and nurses' aid, is working and at present is remarried and does not care to have further contact with Grossi. The wife states that she was given custody of their son, [redacted], age [redacted].

MILITARY SERVICE: Grossi states that he has had no military service but he is registered with the local board #8 in Dallas, Texas.

RESOURCES AND PLANS: Grossi has been a frequent offender with a delinquency dating back to early adolescence. Early in life he experienced a broken home and subsequently was tried in various foster homes but failed to make a proper adjustment. He has not had the benefit of consistent stable parental supervision and he seems unstable in his social adjustment and has reacted aggressively towards his environment. His past behavior seems to indicate a lack of good judgement and insight into his personal problems and he has failed to demonstrate his ability to control himself in a socially acceptable way in relation to himself and his environment. Grossi should be encouraged in the institutional programs that are available which are designed for developing insight in to personal difficulties and developing new attitudes towards human relationships and moral and social values. He states that he owns no property, owes no debts, and when released he expects to continue his occupation as a cartoonist and in the commercial art field, probably in Dallas, Texas. While at the institution he would like to be given the opportunity to further his training in his profession and would like to gain other experiences in the printing field.

RESIDENCE: Dallas, Texas. Grossi was born in New Jersey and has been a transient most of his adult life. He has lived in Dallas since 1949 and this appears to be his legal residence.

USFO: Fort Worth, Texas
